

World Philosophy Day Talk

Sponsored by the Philosophy Dept.

Dr. Ashley Glassburn will be delivering a talk entitled:

Indigenous Language Loss and Epistemic Value

Linguists estimate that in the next 70 years we will lose more last speakers of Indigenous languages than we have in the last 200. What is lost when a language ceases to be spoken? To what extent can a dormant language be reclaimed? What is the epistemic value of Indigenous language reclamation? Dr Glassburn will explore these questions as she shares her experience learning and teaching Myaamia.

Dr. Glassburn is an active member of the Miami Nation of Indians of Indiana and a President's Indigenous Peoples Scholar at University of Windsor.

2:30 – 4:00 p.m., November 16, 2022. Oak Room, Vanier Hall. Light refreshments will be available after the talk

World Philosophy Day Talk

Sponsored by the Philosophy Dept.

Dr. Ashley Glassburn will be delivering a talk entitled:

Indigenous Language Loss and Epistemic Value

Linguists estimate that in the next 70 years we will lose more last speakers of Indigenous languages than we have in the last 200. What is lost when a language ceases to be spoken? To what extent can a dormant language be reclaimed? What is the epistemic value of Indigenous language reclamation? Dr Glassburn will explore these questions as she shares her experience learning and teaching Myaamia.

Dr. Glassburn is an active member of the Miami Nation of Indians of Indiana and a President's Indigenous Peoples Scholar at University of Windsor.

2:30 – 4:00 p.m., November 16, 2022. Oak Room, Vanier Hall. Light refreshments will be available after the talk